Response	Uses	Limits
AVOIDING Not addressing the conflict, either by withdrawing from the situation or postponing the issues.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ When confronting is too dangerous or damaging ▪ When a situation requires “cooling off” ▪ When you need more time to prepare ▪ When an issue is unimportant 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Issues may never get addressed ▪ May lead to explosions of pent-up anger ▪ Slow death of relationships through stagnation and dullness ▪ Loss of accountability ▪ Your views might make a difference in the resolution
ACCOMODATING Yielding to another person’s point of view; paying attention to their concerns and neglecting your own.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ When you see that you are wrong ▪ When the issue is of little importance to you ▪ When you want harmony to build the relationship or credits toward a more important issue ▪ Demonstrates self discipline of ego 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ You may never get your concerns addressed ▪ Resentments may build ▪ Stunted growth of personal gifts ▪ Denies others benefit of healthy confrontation
ADVOCATING Also called Competing, Forcing, or Controlling Pursuing personal concerns at another’s expense. Can mean standing up for your own or others’ rights, defending a position that you believe is correct, or simply trying to win.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ When immediate action is needed ▪ When principles or rights are at stake ▪ When rules must be enforced or challenged ▪ To maintain stability 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Intimidates people so they are afraid to admit problems and give you important information ▪ May harm relationship when others’ needs are not considered ▪ Atrophy of gifts in others ▪ Stagnation
COMPROMISING Seeking a middle ground by “splitting the difference.” The solution partially satisfies (and partially dissatisfies) both parties.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ For fast decision making on minor disagreements ▪ When all else fails ▪ When finding some solution is better than stalemate ▪ When two parties of equal strength are committed to mutually exclusive goals 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Losing sight of larger issues and values and possibly not pleasing anyone ▪ A more creative solution may be missed by a rush to give in ▪ May lead to mediocrity and blandness ▪ Possibly unprincipled agreements ▪ Not appropriate if important principles are at stake ▪ Likelihood of patching symptoms and ignoring root causes
COLLABORATING Working with someone by exploring your disagreement, generating alternatives, and finding a solution that mutually satisfies the concerns of both parties. Requires an equal balance of power.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Can result in creative decisions that are legitimate, as well as stronger relationships ▪ Helpful when you need a decision that addresses the concerns of both parties to achieve long-term stability ▪ Others blossom and develop new gifts 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Not as helpful for minor decisions or when time is limited ▪ Cannot happen when there is an imbalance of power or when resources do not allow a true collaborative effort ▪ May not work when questions of right and wrong need to be resolved ▪ Analysis paralysis
